Introduction

Europe is home to world-leading, growing companies. This isn't the Europe presented in the media but look closely and you will see an investment universe being transformed by the resurgence of European ambition.

At Baillie Gifford, our European Equities team believe that Europe is often overlooked and misunderstood. It is so much more than the complex, bureaucratic juggernaut that we hear and read about. When we look at Europe, we see a home to leading companies in structural niches, to world-beating consumer franchises and, increasingly, to a thriving start-up culture. There are, of course, plenty of European businesses which could be described as dull and unattractive, and these types of businesses have historically made up a large part of European equity indices. However, a resurgence of ambition is happening right before our eyes, re-forming the investment landscape, and creating a widening divergence between the winners and losers, the bureaucratic and the innovative. This, we believe, will present significant opportunities for the optimistic among us who are willing to invest in Europe's great growth companies for the long-term.

Philosophy

We aim to create value for our clients and society by finding and owning Europe's great growth companies. To generate remarkable returns over time we strongly believe that our investment philosophy and process needs to break from convention. Since the inception of our first European equities strategy in 1985 we have been working on this very task. There are three core beliefs which underpin our investment approach:

Outliers

Experience tells us that most companies fail to add shareholder value. The majority of long-term stock market value creation is not generated by aggregating a large number of mediocre returns from average companies. In fact, long-term stock market value creation is dominated by a small number of special companies. We do not want to own a collection of average companies in the hope of achieving a good frequency of positive returns, we aspire to own these special 'outliers' which we believe can earn us a multiple of our initial investment. We have calculated that over the past 30 years, the probability of a European stock at least doubling over a five-year period is 30 per cent. This means that when analysing a company, we are assessing whether the probability of that stock at least doubling is greater or less than that base rate of 30 per cent. Having a hurdle rate of at least 2x return over five-years is an ambitious target but it allows us to focus on that very small subset of companies capable of generating outstanding returns. These outliers typically have large, attractive market opportunities to pursue, have developed strong competitive advantages and are backed by founders and management teams who put the sustainability of their business ahead of short-term gain.

Unconventional approach

To find these outliers, we must be prepared to be deliberately unconventional in our approach. We think that there are three aspects to this:

- 1. Optimism: We need to think about what can go right, rather than what can go wrong in an investment case. We need to be willing to embrace uncertainty and recognise that we will make mistakes. We need to recognise that returns in equity markets are asymmetric, with the maximum loss capped to the initial stake and the upside unbounded. For our portfolios, returns are determined less by the occasional, and inevitable mistakes, but by those very successful investments.
- 2. Dare to be different: We must be comfortable ignoring the benchmark and our competitors. Our portfolios will look different to the majority of our peers and the benchmark, reflecting the uniqueness of our approach.
- 3. Genuinely long-term: Finally, we must be prepared to own businesses for the very long term. We believe great businesses can be structurally mispriced as the market often underestimates their durability and attractiveness. In aggregate our average holding period will typically be between five and 10 years, implying a portfolio turnover of 10–20 per cent. We are likely to hold individual companies for a much longer period.

Unique Insights

Prioritising unique, alternative sources of information over traditional sources of investment information is essential if we are to generate exceptional returns. Academia, visionaries, futurists, and companies themselves can all provide us with insights which can lead to greater understanding of potential investments but also the practice of investment itself.

Our Investment Process

We think it is neither productive nor lucrative for us to cover the whole universe of companies we could theoretically invest in. Instead, we have a clear idea of what we are looking for and aim to be disciplined in our pursuit of identifying Europe's great growth companies. Rather than conducting superficial research on a large number of investment opportunities, we perform in-depth analysis on a small number of companies. We are wary of replacing or diluting our existing holdings simply in the name of doing something new.

Our 10-question research framework sits at the heart of our investment process and helps focus our attention on those factors which we believe are most associated with potential outliers.

Growth

We prefer companies that are ambitious in what they want to achieve. We seek to own companies which reinvest their capital aggressively to pursue large, structural growth opportunities. This may take the form of investing in organic or acquisitive growth.

1. What is the five-year growth potential?
2. What about the next 10 years and beyond?

Edge

Growth is meaningless if the business does not possess a durable competitive advantage. It is in the search for enduring corporate excellence that we spend most of our time, analysing companies to learn more about their culture and to deepen our understanding of the elusive elements that combine to make up a company's competitive edge. There is no magic recipe, but we believe that by diligently practising the art of business analysis we can dramatically improve our odds of success.

3. Does the company have a special culture?
4. How sustainable is its competitive position?
5. Are returns attractive and improving?

Alignment

Great businesses achieve the rare feat of aligning the interests of its most important stakeholders: its customers, its employees, its executives, its owners and, ultimately, society at large. Alignment creates the ability for a business to endure. We believe that a long-term mindset is a crucial prerequisite for aligning interests. Adopting a long-term view entails resisting the temptation to maximise short-term profits at the expense of one or more groups of stakeholders. More specifically, it also means that the people running the company behave like owners. It should thus come as little surprise that we expect much of our portfolio to consist of companies with a long-term inside owner.

6. Are management and stakeholders well-aligned?
7. How does it contribute to society?

Return

We believe that to outperform over long periods of time, it is necessary to build a portfolio that has the potential to produce asymmetric returns. Not only do we look at the probability of an investment to at least double over five years but also consider what might happen if the investment thesis really works out.

8. How likely is a 2x return over five years?
9. How might we make more than this?
10. Why doesn't the market appreciate this?

How We Integrate ESG

We believe strongly that companies should be able to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. By considering each company's environmental and social impact, and their governance practices, we will not only mitigate any financial risk from their activities but also help companies become more robust and contribute to long-term returns. Each member of the team integrates ESG into their analysis via the 10-question framework. This in turn is boosted by the specialist input of the team's dedicated ESG analyst. This analysis on its own will not be responsible for generating returns; we see it as an essential part of our toolkit which will help us identify those special companies that have outlier potential.

There are three aspects to our integration of ESG:

1. Exclusions: We apply the UN Global Compact principles screen and avoid companies involved in activities that cause environmental or social harm that are likely to face increasing regulatory pressure and disruption.

2. Fundamental research: Questions 3, 6 and 7 of our research framework are explicitly focused on uncovering ESG risks and opportunities.

3. Stewardship: Baillie Gifford's over-arching ethos is that we are 'actual' investors. We seek to deliver long-term returns for our clients and to benefit society. Therefore, we have a responsibility to behave as supportive and constructively engaged long-term investors. Our approach favours a small number of simple principles which help shape our interactions with companies. These stewardship principles are as follows:

- Prioritisation of long-term value
- A constructive board
- Long-term focused remuneration with stretching targets
- Fair treatment of stakeholders
- Sustainable business practices

Alternative Insights

We also seek outside opinions. Because great minds think unlike.

In the European Equities team we are dubious about the value of conventional perspectives. We actively avoid market noise, sell-side research, and business school orthodoxy. If we are to conduct high-quality research and generate exceptional returns, we must consider unique, alternative sources of insight. We utilise a wide range of resources to secure alternative sources of information: from hosting industry experts in our offices, to the firm's sponsorship of the Edinburgh International Book Festival to tasking freelance journalists with researching particular topics.

Our relationships with both public and private companies, founders and visionaries is of particular importance to us. These relationships regularly provide us with opportunities to learn and gain insight into culture, the business models of the future, and competitive advantages. The benefits from considering these alternative sources has a flywheel effect, improving not only individual pieces of research but also the investment process more broadly.

In addition, an area of growing importance to us is academic sponsorship. The firm now spends a significant amount of money supporting programmes at UK universities, including a Genomics studentship, a dementia research fund, and a PhD for 3D printing. We have established partnerships with Delft University in the Netherlands, where they assist our thinking in innovative areas like robotics and drones. We have also been enjoying an expanding relationship with the Santa Fe Institute, the world's leading research centre for complex systems science, as well as with Arizona State University, where the work of Hendrik Bessembinder has been of particular interest to us. This work has been useful in driving forward our own thinking on the asymmetry of long-term stock returns and our ambition to access the outlier stocks on behalf of our clients.

Portfolio Construction

So, what does the future of Europe look like? Here are the ins and outs.

We aim to construct high conviction portfolios of between 30 and 50 of Europe's great sustainable growth businesses which can at least double in value over a five-year period. Our investment universe is defined as those companies with a market cap greater than £1bn. This provides an opportunity set of around 1,000 companies. However, we don't attempt to cover the entire ground – our performance will be driven by what we do own rather than what we do not.

We employ a team-based decision-making approach. All team members undertake fundamental company research and submit ideas for discussion after having completed our 10-question research framework. After the team discusses an investment case, a company may be brought forward for consideration at a separate portfolio construction group meeting. Operating as a team does not mean that we require consensus for a new holding to be bought. Instead we believe it is crucial for us to back individual enthusiasm. This allows controversial ideas to get into the portfolio. In our experience, it is often these types of investments that end up providing asymmetric returns. At the same time, it is our overall conviction and enthusiasm which determine holding sizes; this ensures we are investing in the most attractive investment opportunities. The result of our construction process is a concentrated portfolio of companies, with exceptional growth characteristics and differentiated corporate cultures that will enable them to execute on their opportunity over the very long-term.

How we come together to discuss ideas

Weekly stock discussions

Every Thursday, the investment team, as well as guests from other investment teams, meets to discuss company research. These meetings are not in place to make final decisions on companies, instead they help to shape pieces of research and determine whether to keep progressing with an idea.

Monthly portfolio construction group

The decision makers on the team meet on a monthly basis, giving their thoughts on the current portfolio and potential new purchases. This meeting is deliberately separated from our stock discussions to provide time for reflection before making a decision.

Bi-annual reading days

Every six months, the team steps away from day-to-day research to consider interesting topics and consider how we might evolve our investment approach.

Holding is often harder than Selling

The ownership of potential outliers is a challenging enterprise. It requires a lot of mental fortitude. Conventional investment wisdom often suggests selling stocks in drawdowns and taking profits on winners. However, by applying this orthodox approach we would risk foregoing significant future returns. In our experience, it is inevitable that outliers will face periods of drawdown; the path to exceptional returns is not linear. It is imperative that we remain focused on fundamentals and the long-term in the face of such noise. Likewise, after a strong run of performance, we must be conscious of further upside in the context of a business' long-term opportunity set.

Foregoing future returns is a significant opportunity cost for our clients, and it's one we would rather avoid. We continually monitor the companies we own, testing the validity of an investment case and assessing the probabilities of achieving at least double from its current valuation over a five-year period. Our unconventional approach and belief in seeking unique insights enables us to do this. By thinking more about what can go right, rather than wrong in a business, we put ourselves in a better position to exploit the asymmetric nature of equity returns. Seeking out unique insights allows us to gain deeper and more useful understanding of businesses, industries and markets and enables us to abstract ourselves from the noise of the average market participant opinion. Ultimately, we believe valuation is a much shorter-term consideration than the quality of a business and that our willingness to own successful businesses has underpinned the performance we have generated for our clients over the long-term.

Of course, we must also be prepared to sell a stock. When we do so, it is likely because of the fundamental impairment of the investment case, or if we feel that the probability of earning a 2x return over five years is below our base rate of 30 per cent. We will also reduce a holding if we think that the probability of achieving that return has reduced. Causes of the impairment of an investment case include:

- A loss of trust with the management team
- A severe deterioration in business or industry economics
- A deterioration in innovation or ambition

Risk management

Our approach to risk is pragmatic and we don't believe in a universal solution. We believe that permanent loss of capital is the most important risk to any portfolio, over and above model-based risk measures and historic share-price behaviour. We seek to ensure that portfolios are sufficiently diversified and managed in accordance with guidelines, while at the same time accurately reflecting the team's investment convictions. We consider the following key areas of risk:

Fundamental Risk: Our first line of defence is rigorous stock analysis. New buy ideas are subject to thorough review by the European Equity Team. The investment case for all holdings is constantly re-examined, with input from a plurality of Baillie Gifford research teams. We will tolerate uncertainty in an investment case and embrace the possibility that any individual investment may have a wide range of outcomes.

Portfolio Risk: We seek to maintain an appropriate level of diversification at the overall portfolio level to reduce risk and we have established portfolio risk guidelines which are formally reviewed on a regular basis. The investment managers take the overall portfolio context into account when considering any buy or sell ideas that result from the weekly stock review. Our aim is to assess the real risks within the portfolio through forward-looking and open-minded debate, rather than relying solely on backward-looking risk models.

Liquidity Risk: We maintain a firm rule that we will not hold more than 10 per cent of the portfolio in stocks where we hold more than 10 days' trading volume at time of purchase. This ensures that the portfolio remains sufficiently liquid to enable positions to be exited or client cash flows to be managed with minimal impact.

Trading Risk: Baillie Gifford has a separate and dedicated centralised Trading Team. Our proprietary Restrictions System is designed to prevent inappropriate transactions before any trading takes place.

Independent Oversight: We have an independent Investment Risk, Analytics and Research Team which uses a range of tools to carry out in-depth reviews and analysis of portfolio risk on a regular basis. The team reports formally every quarter to the investment managers, Client Service Team, and our Investment Risk Committee (IRC). Their work includes analysis of portfolio construction, investment decision-making and delivered performance, as well as more traditional measures, such as tracking error and volatility. The team make use of third-party systems including statistical risk models provided by SunGard APT and Style Research. The team is experienced in assessing the methodology and limitations of these tools, as well as interpreting output in such a way that is relevant for the strategy, particularly in different market conditions. Further analysis, beyond the scope of traditional model-based measures, is carried out on a regular basis to provide a broader view of sources of risk and thematic exposures within portfolios.

Why Invest with Baillie Gifford

Meet the great European based company that helps us find great European based companies.

Baillie Gifford was founded in 1908 in Edinburgh where it continues to have its headquarters and is an investment partnership, wholly owned by the people who invest for and look after our clients. Through each successive generation of partners our sole focus on generating superior long-term investment results for our clients has been the bedrock of our growth.

Partnership defines us

Our structure allows us to put our clients' needs first rather than dance to the tune of external shareholders. It brings stability and a long-term time frame to everything we do in our business, whether choosing the best investments for our clients' portfolios or continually investing in the firm and developing our people.

Partnership also brings independence, allowing us to be truly active investors. Our portfolios are shaped by where the best investment opportunities lie, rather than where the index dictates. We encourage personal responsibility, creating a strong culture of inquisitiveness, debate and respectful trust in which our investors are nurtured, and thrive.
